In the past two months, the exodus has grown to staggering proportions. More than 14,000 arrived in Malaysia in November alone. For a few days, 1,000 refugees a day were coming ashore. Mr. Ghazali believes the United States must bear most of the responsibility for resettling the refugees and is bitterly critical of U.S. efforts so far. # Poster Asking Carter Aid Removed Twice in China

By John Fraser

PEKING, Dec. 11 - A humanrights poster addressed to President Carter, which was pasted on Peking's Hsi Tan Democracy Wall last Thursday and torn down several hours later, made another appearance at the same spot yesterday and was promptly torn down

This time, however, the self-appointed censor was caught in the act by an angry crowd of 300 persons that had to be restrained by

The original poster had called upon Mr. Carter to expand his human-rights foreign policy to in-clude China and other countries where "suppression is carried on successfully" — particularly at a time when China is reaching out to the West for help in its massive modernization drive.

The specific acts of suppression itemized in the poster are not really at the core of the controversy, as all of them have been admitted recently by Chinese authorities. The government contends that major injusrices existed — and still exist — in Chinese life because there was no proper rule for law in the Cultural Revolution. The authorities maintain that this situation is ending as they seek to re-establish justice and codify a set of laws.

Invited Trouble

Where the poster invited real trouble was in soliciting the assistance of a foreign bead of state in an internal problem. The fact that the poster did not stay up long came as no surprise to foreign observers, even in China's improved atmosphere for public debate. The shock came yesterday, when the epistle appeared again with an explanatory note in which the author, identifying himself only as a "wirness," said the original poster had been

"The appeal to the U.S. president," the introductory note said,

U.S. to Take More Asians

(Continued from Page 1) port to the meeting said that governments should adopt "more liberal and flexible resettlement criteria" and that "a major and swift increase in resettlement opportunities is urgently needed."

Mr. Newsom put forward a fourpoint U.S. plan: · "Greatly increased" financial permament resettlement" on the part of the international communi-

 More equitable sharing by other Southeast Asian countries of the burden on Malaysia and Thailand in giving first asylum to refugees from the Communist countries of the region, and;

· Ensuring that ships, and in particular vessels flying flags of convenience, beed distress signals from boats packed with refugees.

Besides pointing up U.S. efforts to belp the refugees, Mr. Newsom said that Washington also "com-mends in particular" France, Aus-tralia and Canada in giving homes to the refugees.

"could be taken as being reactionary, but it is very important to let people express fully their opinions. Tearing down wall posters is unconstitutional (the right to post them being guaranteed in the Chinese Constitution). I hope that the comrade or comrades who committed this act will try to correct their unconstitutional behavior in the

The text of the original poster was then repeated, word-for-word.
Shortly before nonn yesterday, a good-sized crowd including several Western journalists had gathered at Hsi Tan to read posters. The burnan-rights poster was the main attraction and was being carefully read and copied without comment or reaction by more than 100 per-sons when a middle-aged man came up and began haranguing the jour-nalists. This cannot have been written by a Chinese," he hellowed.
"It must have been written by a Soviet revisionist provocateur.

Moves to Front

The crowd largely ignored him and for a few minutes it appeared that he had left. Instead, he had worked his way to the front. After again shouting that "no Chinese could have written this," he pulled everything but the introduction off

There was an immediate uproar. As the crowd converged on the man, some of the comments included, "Why did you rip it off, you little bastard?" and "You're a funny little fellow, aren't you? You have a good look at the poster and then you rip it off while everyone else is trying to have a look."

As the crowd swelled to several bundred, not one person spoke up in the man's defense. He was driven into the middle of the street, where several security officers stepped in. One officer demanded to know what the uproar was

This idiot has pulled down a wall poster we were all reading," said one man. The police did nothing except try to quell the rising anger, and the self-appointed cen-sor managed to slip away.

Then the tide began to swell. In August, it started to become flood. Instead of small boats with 40 or 50 refugees, there were larger vessels crammed with 500 or more. Last month, the Hai Hong came with 2,500 refugees who had paid their fares. For many Malaysians, that was proof that syndicates were organizing mass escapes that would inundate their country with impoverished, unwanted Vietnamese.

The refugees at Pulau Besar said they fled from Vietnam secretly, in considerable peril, and said they do not believe the Communist government was simply looking the other way. Many of their triends were captured by police. Some had bribed perty officials but most had escaped using their own skill and shrewd planning. Usually, they rowed out in small groups to a waiting fishing boat in the night, bringing with them money and stores of fish and rice.

But all of those here were early arrivals and know nothing of the many thousands who have come out in recent months. They suspect there may be some connivance by the government now, because the boats are larger and the burnan loads bigger.

Jones Group Said Torn by Racial Strife

By Joseph B. Treaster

GEORGETOWN, Guyana, Dec. 11 (NYT) — A confidential document recovered from Jonestown reports that the San Francisco headquarters of the Peoples Temple, a cult that had proclaimed itself an island of racial tranquillity, was riven with bitter dissension between hlacks and whites.

The document - an undated internal memorandum to the Rev. James Jones, the cult's leader - is headed, "Regarding the Race Issue." It says in its first paragraph: "It is obviously oo small issue around this place. Tom, who is usually immune to all issues, calls this the Reign of Terror. The memo, which has many misspellings, appears to have been written by Terri Buford, a white woman in her mid-20s who was one of Mr. Jones' closest confidents until two mooths ago, when she abruptly left Jonestown, the cult's Guyana jungle commune.

The memo was one of several documents that give a picture of life both in Jonestown and at the San Francisco center. The documents were collected from the papers and clothing found in the Jonestown commune after the kill-ings and suicides of more than 900 members of the cult there on Nov.

The documents are laced with re-flections of petty bickering and — like reports from former members — show the preoccupation with secrecy that appears to have motivated many actions by Mr. Jones and his followers.

In addition to the racial tension, the documents describe at length attempts to deal with such matters as a troublesome cult member and discuss the health of Mrs. Buford's They drew the line on a budget

Both sides had regarded the strike authorization as certain, so the main questions being asked were when and how long. The speculative answers suggested a walk-out starting after the paid Christ-mas vacation week, which begins Dec. 25, and lasting a long time.

The shipyard is contesting the validity of a representational election last January in which the steelworkers scored an organizing breakthrough in the traditionally anti-union South, gaining the larg-est bargaining unit that organized labor had woo anywhere in decades. Mrs. Buford said that she personally had "not gotten the race flap that others have bere," but added: "I am sure that in time! will not also be exempt."

In another memorandum, one marked "For J.J.'s Eyes Only, Mrs. Buford asked for guidance in handling a woman, referred to as "Lilly," who apparently wanted to come to Jonestown but in the meantime was believed to be feign-ing sickness and refused to work in San Francisco.

In a cryptic passage that seems to suggest the use of drugs, the memo says: "As for the other thing, it is going to be extremely hard to do because her eating is extremely odd (I mean it is hard to mix something with potato chips). I don't know. Also, your job may be don for you in that she already believes that she is dying."

When Mr. Jones was not ba-ranguing members of his cult on the commune's public-address sys-tem, be would use it for broadcasts from Radio Moscow, the BBC and the Voice of America. The cult members took ootes and were later tested. Those who had good scores were given an extra piece of fudge or a molasses cookie on Sunday evening. Poor students were given extra work.

Several pages of what appear to be notes taken from the radio broadcasts, with a good deal of the writers' biases included, were ob-tained by The New York Times. On one page of lined paper, there is a passage in peocil that reads: "Shirley Chisolm — black Congresswoman. Mayor of NY city Cox was going to appoint ber to the city schools as head of them. But the people were so racists she backed way from the joh." [The refcrences were to U.S. Rep. Shirley Chisholm, D-N.Y., and to New York Mayor Edward Koch.

Charlie Chaplin's body and solve my problems." Mr. Wardas told the district court here at the start of his trial, Together with 38-year-old Gantcho Ganev, a Bulgarian. Mr. Wardas is accused of desecrating Chaptin's tomb in a village grave-yard and attempting to extort $600,000 from the family.

The coffin containing Chaplin's body disappeared March 1, just over two months after his death at 88 on Christmas Day. It was found 21/2 months later, buried in a corn-field beside Lake Geneva, and returned to its original resting place
—this time inside a sealed concrete

Body Deteriorated

According to police evidence, the body was almost unrecognizable because of deterioration due to damp when it was recovered. Actress Geraldine Chaplin, 34 said the theft of her father's body bad been a terrifying experience for ber family. She said her younger brother and sister had been threatened with violence unless the fami-

The family lawyer, Jean-Felix Paschoud, quoted Lady Oona Chaplin as refusing to deal with the bodysnatchers: "My husband is in heaven and in my heart."

Mr. Wardas said be asked his friend Mr. Ganev to help dig up the coffin at Corsier-sur-Vevey near the mansioo where Chaplin lived for 23 years. "I did not feel particularly squeamish about interfering with a coffin," he said. "I was going to hide it deeper in the same bole originally, but it was raining and the earth got too heavy," Mr. Wardas

Pseudonym Used

"I left my country in order to be free, but found it difficult to get steady work in Switzerland." He said the coffin was lifted out into Mr. Ganev's car and later reburied in a field 20 kilometers farther

Then, using the pseudonym "Mr. Cohet," be made several calls to the Chaplin mansion demanding a ranlence to Lady Chaplin's children if he did not get the mooey, Mr. Wardas said.

Co-defendant Ganev told the court: "I was not bothered about lifting the coffin. Death is not so important where I come from." He said he had been jailed in Bulgaria for attempting to flee to Turkey, but had eventually succeeded in es-caping to the West and finding work as a mechanic in Lausanne.

Mr. Ganev said that after using his vehicle to move the coffin and belping to rebury it, he took no further part in the affair.

Pope Appeals For Respect of Human Rights

VATICAN CITY, Dec. 11 (AP)

— Pope John Paul II has called himself saddened and dissastified with the human rights situation in the world.

In a Dec.2 message to UN Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim re-leased by the Vatican today, the pope said, We are bound to observe a seemingly growing diver-gence between the meaningful declarations of the United Nations and the sometimes massive increase of human rights violations in all parts of society and of the world." The pope also assailed advocates of abortion, listing "the right to be born, the right to life, the right to responsible procreation" with "the right to work, to peace, to freedom and social justice, the right to participete in decisions that affect people and nations

Rights Group Said to Grow in Czechoslovakia

VIENNA, Dec. 11 (AP) — The Czechoslovak "Charter 77" humanrights movement has grown from 300 signers at the beginning of last year to 1,000 now, despite tough measures against it by Czechoslo-vak Communist authorities, an interview with its spokesman, broadcast by Austrian radio over the weekend, disclosed.

Supreme Court to Rule on Reverse Bias

WASHINGTON, Dec. 11 (AP)

The Supreme Court agreed today to decide whether employers without proof of a history of racial bias illegally discriminate against whites when special preferences are given to minority workers. The big legal question left unanswered by the court's Bakke decision last June is presented in a trio of appeals stemming from the job discrimination suit of a Louisiana worker, Brian Weber.

The Carter administration had asked the justices to send the case back to lower courts for further

Civil rights leaders and government officials say Mr. Weber's thus far successful suit against his employer, Kaiser Aluminum & Chemical Co., poses a major threat to government efforts to improve employment opportunities for minorities.

Lawyers for Mr. Weber, a white employee at Kaiser's Gramercy, La., plant, have called the case one of "reverse discrimination."

Affirmative Action Case

Lawyers for Kaiser and United Steelworkers union are asking the justices to overturn a 5th U.S. Cir-Court of Appeals ruling that from voluntarily setting up "affirmative action" programs.

In the Bakke decision, a deeply divided Supreme Court ruled that a state-ruo medical school in California illegally discriminated against Allan Bakke, who is white, in deny-ing him admission.

Mr. Bakke had charged that less-qualified applicants had been admitted ahead of him under the school's special program aimed at increasing its number of minority students.

But while ordering the school to admit Mr. Bakke, the justices did not destroy the affirmative action coocept. They ruled that race can properly be considered as one of many factors in school admission decisions to provide for a diverse student population. .

Because the decision was grounded in a federal law dealing

A decision in Mr. Weber's case could put that crucial view in focus. Mr. Weber sued Kaiser in 1974 after he was refused participation in a craft training program Kaiser had established at its 15 plants across the nation.

The program, approved in a labor-management agreement, ac-cepted minority and white employs on a one-for-ooe basis. # Is your car only half-Italian?

Volvo 262C Designer, Bertone

You'd be surprised how many European cars have some Italian in them. And it's not just the Italian sense of design that's sought after by the car manufacturers of the world. We've developed scores of engineering innovations that have been used in other countries' cars.

For instance, the front-mounted transverse engine with in-line gear box, first produced on a mass scale by Fiat, is now being copied by Volkswagen. Ford, Honda, and Chrysler.

A system of valve adjustments was developed by Fiat and it was copyrighted and adopted by Volvo, Volkswagen, and Audi.

And the way the suspension of Italian cars is put together gives them their incredible feel and mastery of the road, which has been imitated by car makers all over the world, but not exactly duplicated.

And that's the point. No matter how much of Italy they put in a French, German, English, Japanese or Swedish car, it's still not an Italian car.

It doesn't come from the country that's won more races and rallies than any other country on earth.

It doesn't come from an 80-year tradition of excellence in engineering and design. And it doesn't come from the Fiat Group, which includes Lancia and Ferrari. So the next time you buy a car, instead of getting one that looks, drives or feels the road kind of like an Italian car, why not buy the real thing instead? Like a Fiat.

Iran — and Romania

As great crowds throng Iranian streets, marking Shiite holy days with calls for the departure of the shah, the mood of Iran is very important to the United States. But few Iran-watchers would attempt to guess just what will emerge from the current religio-political crisis, while the Soviet Union has made it clear that it would resist U.S. intervention on the shah's behalf. So no troops fly to Tehran from the United States; rather, the families of Americans in Iran fly home.

Is this a part of the post-Vietnamese retreat? After all, while the Islamic opponents of the shah are careful to point out their own anti-Communism, one of the first contests of the cold war came over Soviet occupation of part of Iran, and there are unquestionably Communist cells in that country. Moreover, the enemies of the shah regard the United States as enemies of themselves and plan for policies that could be inimical to U.S. strategic and oil interests.

On the other hand, the shah has as much military power as could be used on his own behalf; what he faces is less an overthrow by force of arms than one by force of public opinion. And, in such a struggle, open use of U.S. troops would only work against the status quo. So Washington's caution in this respect makes sense; that it is not mere feebleness is demonstrated in, of all places, Romania.

The United States has oot sent military aid to bolster the independence of President

Ceausescu's somewhat heretical Communist regime. Instead, Secretary of the Treasury Blumenthal brought some kind words to Bucharest. But since these came on the heels of Mr. Ceausescu's refusal to back Soviet demands for bringing the Warsaw Pact closer together and spending more on defense, they stirred up considerable interest in Europe. Romania has long been part of Soviet Balkan purposes; it was defeated by Soviet troops; it does occupy territory that is more important to Moscow than Iran. And much of the relationship between Eastern and Western Europe depends on the relationship between the Soviet Union and the other Communist

So, in terms of simple exertion of influence, Romania balances off Iran in Washington's books. In terms of the diffusion of that influence, which once meant the stark confrontation of Moscow and Washington, both Romania and Iran represent question marks, rather than plain statements of allegiance to one or the other superpowers. And this is reflected in the progress toward a new agreement on strategic weapons, in practical dis-cussions of trade, by the United States and the Soviet Union.

Iran and Romania might have produced, before this, crises between the superpowers. They still could do so, but for the time being both Moscow and Washington are using a fair measure of reason rather than simplistic emotional threats.

The Return of the Ecu

The first ecu was a French coin minted by Louis IX seven centuries ago. By the kind of happy coincidence that occurs to the minds of ingenious politicians, ECU is also the acronym for the European currency unit, which goes into effect the beginning of next year. With this bow to French sensibilities, six nations of Western Europe are now attempting another long step toward unification. The French will keep their franc, the West Germans their mark and so forth, but these currencies will all be tightly tied to the ecu. If it works, it means that the six countries will eventually have one currency among them although it will have a different name in each of those countries.

The implications for policy are extraordinary. The six governments will have to come much closer in their views on inflation, employment and growth than they have ever been. They have been pushed into this experiment by a judgment that the U.S. dollar will never again provide their economies with the kind of firm base that it offered until the: beginning of this decade. They are trying to insulate themselves from the swings in the: dollar's value.

In the past the French, and particularly the Gaullists, resisted this kind of a commitment on grounds that it inevitably meant a significant sacrifice of national sovereignty. But Gaullist ideas are in decline in France and other goals - above all, the control of inflatioo - have become much more urgent. There is a widespread conviction in Western Europe that no parliamentary democracy can withstand the political pressures and temptations to keep providing public benefits that are popular but inflationary. One remedy is to find a tamper-proof mechanism, beyond a government's reach, that enforces anti-inflationary discipline automatically. That's what the gold standard used to do, periodically pitching countries into recessions and worse. For a generation after World War II, the dollar standard was a milder and more intelligent substitute. But now the world has outgrown the dollar standard. To the six European governments -France, West Germany, Denmark and the three in Benelux - the most sensible solution seems a collective regional system, dominated by no one country but influenced by all of them.

But of the nine members of the Common Market, three have refused to join. Those three -Britain, Ireland and Italy - are the poor countries among the nine. There is a kind of class struggle now going on within the Common Market. Italy and Britain have been complaining bitterly that the market's present financial structure, dominated by the gigantic fund for farm price supports, constitutes a highly efficient device for transferring wealth from the poor to the rich. Italy and Britain are both big losers in the agricultural plan; the principal beneficiary is wealthy France. The three poor members want subsidies built into the new currency system to redistribute wealth the other way. So far they haven't been able to strike a bargain. The British evidently intend to defer the whole issue of participation until after their parliamentary elections next year.

But the crucial question for the new system is whether West Germany and France can hold together. France has dropped out of less formal European currency alliances twice before, because it couldn't get its inflation rate down anywhere near the level of the West Germans. At the beginning of this decade, the Common Market had been talking about a unified currency by 1980. Then the oil crisis, and the tremendous wave of inflation, seemed to destroy that hope completely. But now, unexpectedly, the idea of a currency union is moving again.

The reasons for it are not happy ones. The Europeans are drawing together only in the face of a future that seems increasingly uncertain and threatening to their prosperity. But it is oever the good times and the easy prospects that generate political will.

Delay in Mideast Peace Treaty

A peace treaty between Egypt and Israel is now unlikely to be signed by Dec. 17, the target date set at Camp David. This in itself should cause few worries if the Israelis do not take the opportunity to start building new settlements on the West Bank and Gaza. The general cooviction in Cairo and Jerusalem is that a peace treaty will be signed. The leaders of both sides, together with President Carter, have invested too much of their presuge and credibility in producing a treaty to allow a total stalemate to develop. It might be necessary, however, for another meeting like Camp David to resolve remaining differences. — From the Financial Times (London).

Cults and Surrender of Judgment

By Arthur Janov

L OS ANGELES — was a powerful that it can make ordinarily intelligent people surren-der all judgment and follow blindly into a horror such as Jonestown?

The various cults, faiths, and even the authoritarian psychotherapies have one thing in common:

They offer fulfillment of unmet need. Their power is their ability to take a new page 1. take away nearly all awareness of the pain and suffering of lifelong deprivation.

Need — oeed that was never satissied from the first days of life is the follower's neket of admis-sion. He is in the grip of something much stronger, and much older than his powers of judgment. He is in a matrix of unconscious, unending feelings of need, and these can render him as naive and vulnerable as an infant turning toward its mother for warmth.

Demagogues

The need of the follower feeds on that of the leader, whose unfulfilled need is probably even more pathetically intense than that of the lowliest member of his flock. It is oot an accident that the leaders, the fascists and demagogues of this world, are usually products of broken, dis-torted childhoods, as are their most rabid followers. The leader blots out the intolerable pains of his life through the control and manipulation of others; the follower finds his relief in being controlled. The naked desperation of the leader is evident when his power is threat-ened—the ravings of Hitler in his final years and the increasing bi-zarre behavior of Jones are typical of this phenomenon. Thus the relationship between leader and foldependent upon the other to fulfill certain needs.

The question asked repeatedly about Jonestown is how something so humanitarian could wind up as such a bald example of fascist control. The assumption is that Jones and the commune were oormal and noble, and then suddenly "went crazy."

The problem with that assump tion is that the surrender of self, of judgment, of feeling had taken place long before the outward ap-pearance of the cult became bizarre. The astonishing control demonstrated at the end was possible because, in any follower-leader compact, one has already given up the self. The model and precedent for that surrender is the child-parent relationship.

Inner Starvation

The child-follower does not mean to give up the self; his or her parents did not mean to take it away; but with deprivation of basic needs, the surrender occurs. The child who is starved of needs early in life cannot afford to feel the reality of his deprivation. And so the pain is never resolved. Instead, that child spends a lifetime looking for something to ease the inner starva-

Sometimes the pain will be quict-ed later when the person finds a deed later when the person finds a de-pendent marriage or relationship, or when he plunges into a struggle for a college degree or a profession-al goal; but for some people these milder ocurotic struggles are not enough. Their deprivation requires more potent relief. Instead of an in-dependent self, there is a huge un-conscious burt pushing toward ever conscious hurt pushing toward ever stronger promises of relief.

Although the ends vary, the dy-namics are the same, whether it's Jonestown, Moon, Synanon, Hare Krishna, born-again conversions or authoritarian psychotherapy. In one form or another, the leader's message is, "Give yourself up to me and I will be concerned, I will protect you, guide you, listen to you, care for you and love you."

Such promises wield the greatest power on earth. They can make someone turn over great earthly.

someone turn over every earthly possession to the leader. They can make individuals turn against their relatives and against every natural instinct. As we have seen, they will gladly deprive themselves and even kill themselves for such a leader.

Distant Figure

If you replace those movements and leaders with a distant figure, "God." you will see the same dynamic. But the attraction of the cult leader is that he is real, he is here and can be seen and touched, and he will even talk to you. This same phenomenon of need and response sustains religion, but orga-oized religion is more structured and less frenzied. In either case, the symbolic fulfillment of need brings pervasive control over a follower's actions -- control, for example,

OS ANGELES — What is so over what one can do in bed with a spouse. That is indeed, control.

For thorough control, the cause of the cult must ease the most profound pains, including those that result in death fears. It must provide an external purpose for living — and dying Jones satisfied this requirement well, even assuring his followers that he would meet them in a utopian hereafter. Thus, behavior in the cults fits into a system of reward or punishment — just as it did for the young child in a repressive family.

Fascism is easy to achieve. One must only appear to fulfill need by telling people what they yearn to hear to kill their pain of unfulfilled need. People are reluctant to leave a leader who does this, oo matter how cruel and sadistic he becomes because they always glimpse a ray of hope. Just as in the original family situation, to give up that hope is almost impossible, because it forces one to deal with the painful reality of deprivation.

More followers did oot try to leave Jonestown because to feel forsaken is to be faced again with no hope. No one with great unfulfilled need can take that step. And so those who volunteer for authoritarian ventures tend to stay. They willingly do stupid things; give up their money, or leave their families, or shave off all their hair, or allow themselves to be harangued for

The acts they perform are symbolic rituals to assure the leader that he has cootrol. No one wants that kind of power unless he is neurotic; thus, it is not the abuse of power, but instead, access to such power because power over others is an abuse in itself.

the follower with new people to drug anesthetizes a lifetime of worry about him, to offer him deprivation.

advice to cry with him, and impor-tantly, hold him and touch him. Those are unbeatable attractions.

The hallmark of the leader is his apparently complete certainty, a certainty in direct proportion to his own inner terror and confusion. Outwardly, he seems to have the answers to life, and he offers them unequivocally to anyone who will listen. He cannot afford the slightest suggestion that no one really has any answers for anyone else. All reality is based in each person's own feelings and experience, but the leader is even more divorced from the reality of his own feelings than his followers. He is the origi-nal susceptible victim who will re-cruit others who have been deprived of their feelings, the experiences of themselves that could ground them and provide them with their own answers. Now, instead, the followers will have to read about answers, talk about them, be taught about them, embrace doctrines, and give them-selves over to the leader-therapist-parent who once again will do what

The cult is a drug. This point has been made or implied by others, but what is missing is the recognitioo that drugs cut us off from reality, impair our judgment and make us feel better, but the basic function of the tranquilizer, the morphine, the heroin and the dogma is to kill awareness by killing awareness of pain. The repression of pain is the repression of awareness. That is why any drug is used.

cy of the new family. A further requirement for control, in many cases, is to remove the person not only from his past but from his present. And so the person moves into an isolated commune away from family and former friends, or in a separate building which becomes a world in itself, or in a segregated part of the neigh-borhood. At that point, he becomes more dependent on his group and, above all, on his leader. The group becomes his new family and his to-tal world. It isn't as if he has given his self up to the leader, as some psychiatrists have said in discussing Jonestown; that he had already givonestown; that he had already given up years before to his parents.

Now he simply searches for a oew place to put it. It is no mere coincidence that Jooes was called "father" and "dad" by his followers, and that he reportedly chanted "mother, mother, mother" during the suicide ritual.

Are the cultists crazy? Yes, but no more so than any other true be-lievers or converts. Religion is one form of socially institutionalized insanity. It is the best kind because the follower is never alone in it. His unreality is affirmed constantly by everyone around him. Followers can get together in the fields and chant, say litanies, sing together and believe in the savior — the one who saved them from reality.

TOKYO - If the election of Masayoshi Ohira as president the ruling Liberal-Democratic Party and premier proves anything, it is that the faction remains the unit of political power in Japan, not the party. In spite of efforts by LDP reformers to disband the factions, to which most of the evils of the Japanese political system are attributed, Mr. Ohira's election. and in particular the new method under which it was conducted, have served to entrench factionalism even deeper than before.

For the first time, LDP presidential candidates were nominated in balloting by 1.5 million party members and dues-paying supporters throughout the country in a prima-ry, with the names of the two highest vote-getters to be placed before LDP members of the Diet in a runoff. The move was billed as a major step towards party reform in that it would provide a broader, more popular base of participation than the former system of restricting voting to LDP Diet members and a few local party executives.

The margin of Mr. Ohira's primary victory was so unexpectedly great that Mr. Fukuda, with the second largest oumber of votes among four candidates, withdrew his candidacy. The defeat was a tre-mendous shock to Mr. Fukuda who, with the advantage of an incumbent and a creditable list of achievements during his two years in office, had fully expected to come out comfortably on top.

Accomplishments Under Mr. Fukuda's stewardship, Japan completed a treaty of peace and friendship with China. A new international airport was opened at Narita, oear Tokyo, which previous administrations had been unable to do because of local opposition. Under Mr. Fukuda, the Diet revised the and-monopoly law, a long-pending and difficult task, inflation ws brought under control, and the economy moved ahead

The major factions involved in the presidential contest were those led by Mr. Ohira and Mr. Fukuda and factions headed by Yasuhiro Nakasone (who ran third in the primary), former premier Kakuei Tanaka (currently on trial in the nipulation and deception, the report indicated blatant corruption by the two principal civil servants in the Information Ministry, Eschel and Denys Rhoodie, who were forced to resign at an earlier stage of the affair. But it was abuse of power more than corruption that caused a stir in Parliament. Gen. Van den Bergh, who resigned from his security post the day Mr. Vorster quit as prime minister two months ago, emerged from the report as a ruthless figure who used his personal friendship with Mr. Vorster — rooted in the years they spent together in a World War II internment camp for suspected pro-Nazi activities — to take virtual control of the country.

The general, whose formal powers were a combination of those held in the United States by the directors of the Central Intelligence Agency and the Federal Bureau of Investigation, was revealed by the commission to have been one of the instigators of the Citizen project.

Despite this, Mr. Vorster appointed him to bead a government inquiry into the affair when the press started digging into it, a step that put the security chief in the perfect position to stage a cover-up.

According to the report, the general subsequently used his dual powers as chief investigator and se curity chief in an attempt to redeem Mr. Mulder's reputation and get him elected prime minister. His tactic was to order one of his chief subordinates at the security bureau, L.S. Reynders, to issue a false report to Mr. Vorster vindi-cating Mr. Mulder for his role in the information scandal.

The general leaked the report to the press, but the attempt to play king-maker failed when Mr. Mald-er lost the party's premiership elec-tion to Mr. Botha by the slim margin of 24 votes. The commission reported that Mr. Reynders wept as be confessed to the plot, saying he had feared that the general would have him killed if he refused to issue the false report.

The commission did not mention it, but the most sensational press allegation in the scandal has been the suggestion that the unsolved murder last year of another former official and National Party parliamentary candidate, Robert Smit. and that of his wife, resulted from what Mr. Smit had learned of the Information Ministry's misdoings. In his testimony, the security chief came across unattractively. "He told the commission arrogantly that if be wanted to do sometime to the special spe he would stop at nothing," the rethe commission ob served that Gen. Van den Bergh "was in charge of a network of agents whose qualities he described in sinister terms." In Parliament, Mr. Botha cited the summoning of a special session as proof that the legislators are the country's ultimate authority. But he refused opposition demands for curbs on the secret projects and on the powers of the security bureau, saying they were essential for the defense of the country's "civilized" way of life.

Kaunda Seeks New Term Under Difficult Conditions

By David B. Ottaway

LUSAKA, Zambia, Dec. 11 (WP) - President Kenneth Kaunda, who bas ruled here since Zambia became independent 14 years ago, faces a serious challenge in tomor-row's presidential election.

Presidential elections in black Africa seldom return incumbents with less than 90 percent of the vote. Thus it is something of a trib-ute to Zambia's election process that practically no one expects Mr. Kaunda, 54, to do better than squeak through the country's fourth presidential election. He is running for another five-year term.
In 1973 he received 85 percent of the vote, after a downward turn in his popularity. General disenchant-ment with the then new, single-par-ty system was clearly reflected in the low turnout—less than 40 percent of registered voters.

This year, there are predictions that less than one-third of the 1.5 million registered voters will go to the polis, and that Mr. Kaunda may get the necessary 51 percent of the vote by only a small margin.

Western Concern

The question being pondered by coocerned Western embassies, which oaturally favor Mr. Kaunda, the most pro-Western of the African Company of the Mr. "front-line" leaders involved to the Rhodesian dispute, is what hap-pens then. Perhaps Mr. Kaunda

Under the constitution, if Mr. Kaunda fails to be re-elected he will stay on for three months as a caretaker president while the party holds a congress to select a new presidential candidate and organize another election.

Mr. Kaunda has no official opponent. He is running against a background of a bankrupt, copperbased economy with loog lines out-side shops for even such basic oe-cessities as salt, flour, butter and the staple, corn. A re-election candidate could scarcely dream of worse circum-stances. Not only is Zambia flat on its back economically, but it is caught up in an unpopular war and is taking a beating from Rhodesian air and ground attacks on suspected guerrilla bases.

Soul Singer

The re-election of a president, Zambian style, involves a mixture of Western campaign techniques and authoritarian African tactics.

The state-controlled press has been singing the praises of Mr. Kaunda for weeks oow, and castigating what appears to be a strong bid by opposition elements, many within the ruling party, to turn out a large "no" vote.

An American soul singer, Sal will go on ruling as before. But a minority president is a subject for concern in black Africa, where military coups are all too common.

Davis, has written a song for Mr. Kaunda, "Son of Africa, Loved by Everybody." It plays on the radio and television along with plugs for the president

The United National Independence Party (UNIP), the country's only legal party, has hired a British campaign consultant to oversee a high-powered publicity campaign

The first party slogan for the election was "KK — No Change," but Mr. Kaunda's opponents twisted it to "KK — No Chance." Also, it was realized that a promise of oo change at a time when the country is deep in economic problems and uoder Rhodesian attack was perhaps the wrong approach. The slo-gan was quietly dropped.

While campaign techniques may be Western-influenced, the calculated elimination of all opposition candidates and the careful "vetting," or disqualifying, of even longtime party officials running for the National Assembly seems more African in style.

Changes in the party's constitu-tion this fall disqualified two well-

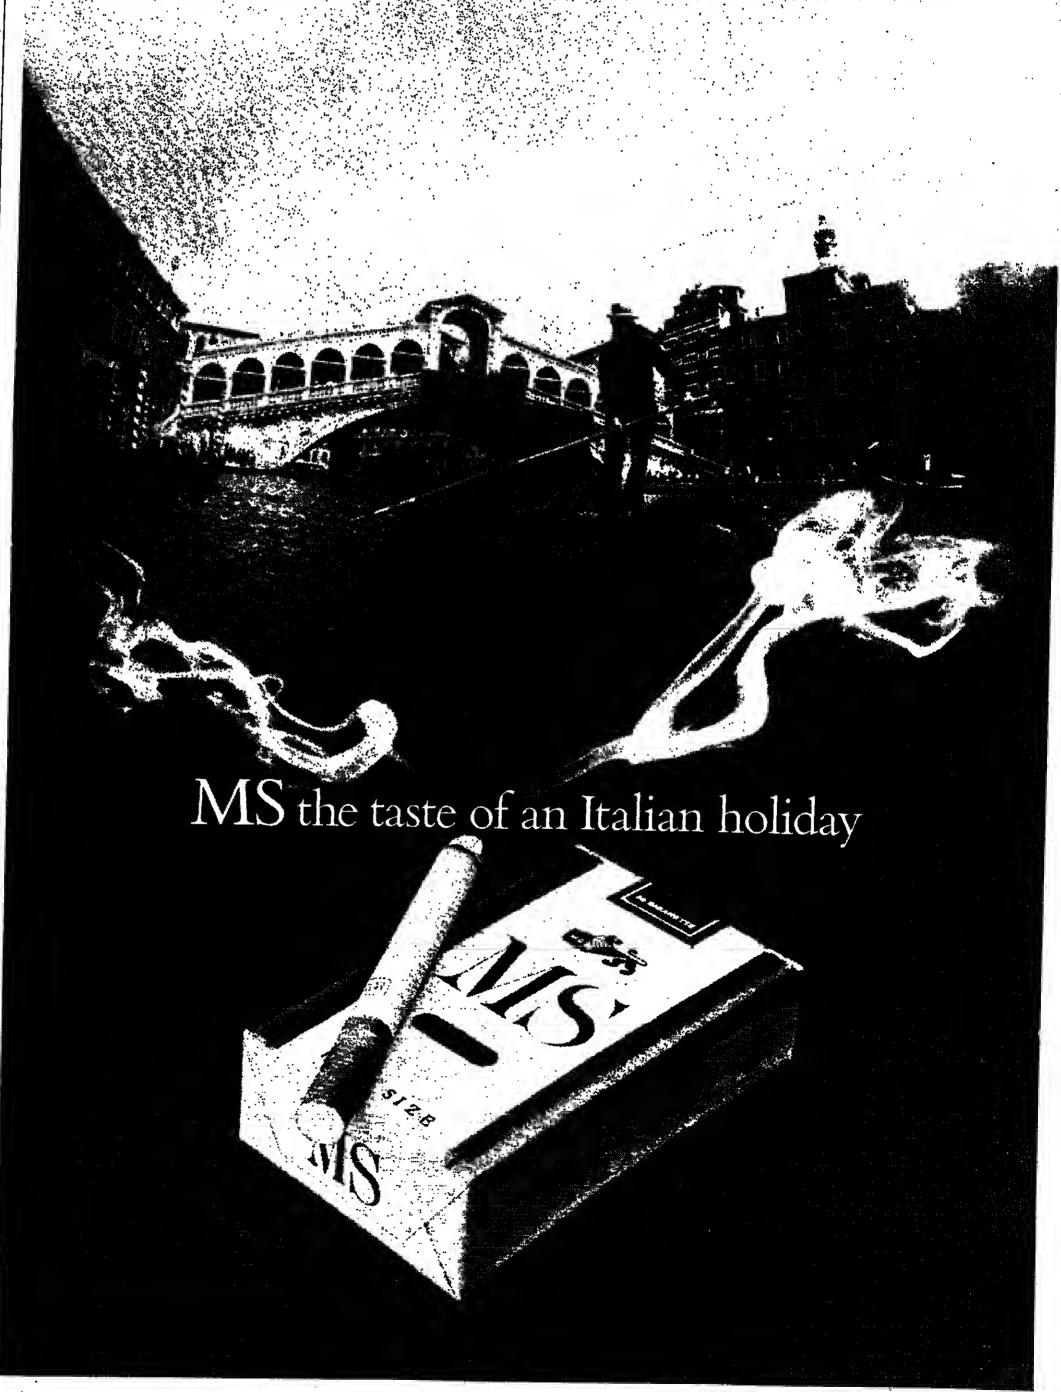

Kapwepwe and Harry Nkumbula, from the presidential race. Mr. Kapwepwe was at one time Zamhia's vice president. Mr. Nkumbula was a founder of the nationalist movement against British colonial rule. Both failed to meet the altered qualifications for entering the presidential election, and the party unanimously endorsed Mr. Kaunda as its sole candidate for the posts of party and state president early in Tomorrow's elections for the 125 seats in the National Assembly will not be noticeably more democratic. Even after local UNIP officials carefully scrutinized contenders for the October primary election, the party's central committee decided that 30 of those who won were unworthy candidates and barred them. Only two were reinstated. One of those who won but was struck from the list was Arthur Wioa, a former minister of finance and education and for the last five years an outspoken National Assembly deputy from Livingstone.

While sharply critical of the party for becoming "rigid and ideolog-ical," Mr. Wina believes that the forthcoming election will be honest and will show accurately whether and will show accurately whether Zambians approve of this authori-tarian trend and of Mr. Launda's

The Sweet Side of Persimmons

PARIS — In March, 1789, a Indians along the Mississippi eating bread made of "prunes" (they dried the fruit and converted it into Museum published an article called Advice to American Farmers about to Settle in New Countries." It advised the taking along of a large kettle "in which you may make maple sugar in summer. Be careful likewise to preserve all the sugar maple, persimmon and chestnut trees you find on your farm. The two former will afford you excellent sugar and syrup."

Some readers may have doubted the competence of a writer who did not know when maple sugar was made and who expected to find maples and persimmons flourishing on the same farm. What might have seemed even more questionable was the information that sugar can be obtained from the persimmon - a fruit too astringent to eat.

But the anonymous author was right. There is plenty of sugar in persimmons; you can even derive molasses of a sort from them, as Gibbons pointed out in "Stalking the Wild Asparagus."
Gibbons observation comes in a chapter brashly headed "The Sugar-Plum Tree," hardly an apt name for the programment of the prick it has for the persimmon if you pick it be-fore fully ripe, as be once did dur-ing an expedition with author John

"The substance [of breakfast]," McPhee later reported, "was a great mound of hot persimmons, which had been stewed in maple sugar. We stuffed them eagerly into our mouths, but we found that all the astringency of slightly unripe persimmons seems to be brought out powerfully when they are stewed. They puckered not only our mouths but also our throats. . Each mouthful tasted fine on entry, but quickly turned into something like a glut of hiorting paper, requiring a half dozen forced swallows to squeeze it down. I excused myself and went for a walk, taking deep breaths."

Ripeness - even over-ripeness - is what make the fruit edible. The time to gather them is when they can be shaken from the tree. If left on the limb, they can be picked and eaten even when there is snow on the ground, provided they have not frozen on the branches which seldom happens in the south-east Gulf states, the American persimmon's favorite territory.

The first Europeans to encounter the persimmon, Diospyras virginiana, were either the Spanish conquistadores, who fed largely on them during their grueling march from Florida to New Mexico, or Hernando de Soto, who reported a little after 1540 that be had found a floury paste).

De Soto talked of "plummes of the making and bigness of outs and [with] three or four stones in them" not a bad description of the persimmon, which is the closest ap-proach in America to the plum, an Old World fruit which did ont exist in America until the colonists imported it. Other early explorers found the immature persimmon inedible, of course, but one appraised the ripe fruit as being "very sweet and pleasant to the taste," adding that it "yields on distillation, after fermentation, a quantity of spirits."

Cherry-Like

All of these witnesses referred to the fruit as orange, so it came as a surprise when Timothy Flint's "A Coodensed Geography and History of the Western States" (1828) spoke of a small blue persimmon. Flint had come upon Diospyros texana, the black persimmon, a native of Mexico. It is indeed very sweet — cherry-like and so soft it melts in

The first discoverers of the persimmon had some difficulty with its name, an Algooquin Indian word. (But the natives of Louisiana had a quite different term for it. ougouile. The French heard it as piakmine, from which they developed plaqueminter, a form that looks so classically French one would never suspect its exotic origin.) Many English-speaking set-tlers called it pessimon or pesse-mine; for Captain John Smith it

By whatever name, Americans generally were out enthusiasoc about the persimmon. The lateness of its season of palatability and its size (about that of a grape) discouraged cultivation, and the wild persimmon was extremely variable in

Limited interest was aroused only when the Japanese persimmon, whose existence had out previously been known to most Americans, was introduced into the United States by, according to some accounts. Commodore Matthew Perry in 1855 (it is established that he did bring in persimmon trees). America seems to have acquired Asiatic persimmons before Europe. where the first fruits appeared on the Paris market in 1873.

I have seen a photograph of Jap-anese children gathering persim-mons in October in a snow-covered landscape, indicating the same sea-sonal peculiarities on both con-tinents. The Oriental persimmons, incidentally, were described as being smaller and more acid than the Japanese fruit known in the United States, suggesting that they were closer to American wild persimmons. The Japanese persimmons we know, cultivated for centuries, are much larger than the American — about tomato size — and they become sweet earlier. They are cultivated on limited scales in California, Georgia and along the Gulf of Mexico.

There are between 150 and 200 species of Diospyros, but only four are at all widely easen, with two others lurking in the background. Besides the American, Japanese and black persimmons, there is Diaspyros long, also called the date plum, found in China and the Hi-malayan region. The two also-rans are a tropical African fruit known as the monkey guava, swamp ebooy of African abony in English, the bush kaki in French, and soun-soun in Bambara; and the mabolo, which was imported from the island of Mauritius - and is being grown experimentally in Florida. .

Opinion is unanimous among those who bave tasted persimmons of all varieties that at their best they are delicious, but the nature of their deliciousness is diversely described. It has been compared with the mango and the guava; it bas been said to have a taste midway between apple and apricot, wherever that lies.

The persimmon could be valuable for a reason other than its fruit: Its wood is potentially valuable, for it beloogs to the ebooy family. But so far as I know this PARIS, Dec. 11 (IHT) — Jazz is traditionally a macho domain, much like football, even though homosexuals are rare. Except for singers there have been few major female soloists.

When composer Carla Bley led an all-star band during the Chateauvallon Festival in the summer of 1977 there were many boos and tomators there there was the formal of the formal transfer there were the summer of the formal transfer the summer of the summ saxophone. Bley's band has since played France again, to unambiguous applause. And the Women's Improvising Group is making some of the most interesting new music in Europe.

Writing about the Women's Group in Le Monde, Francis Marmande wondered if what be likes most about avant-garde European improvisation isn't its feminine side.

'Special Feeling'

And Françoise Dupety, its guitarist, says: "I find a special feeling playing with other women that leads me to discover new musical material. I can arrive at a sort of equilibrium with men, but behind it there's always competition on some level. A woman is intimidated in that situation. Women have their own strength, but men's strength often inhibits them from expressing it."

The Women's Improvising Group was formed last year around Georgie, Born and Lindsay Cooper, who had hoth spent years with a band named Henry Cow, a politically conscious amalgam of pop, jazz and contemporary classical music. One English critic said Henry Cow was "determinedly unapproachable," while the New Musical Express described it as "one of the few genuinely progressive outlits currently in opera-

The group expanded, adding Maggie Nichols, singer with Keith and Julie Tippetts' "Centipede"; Dutch saxophonist Angele Vet-meijer; Swiss pianist Irene Schweitzer and others, including Frenchwoman Dupety, who finds male dominance in jazz "like our culture in general. It has been produced by men for years. Jazz is instinctive, it involves revealing yourself in pub-bic, with all your faults. Although this is not easy for men either, they at least have the habit. Wom-en have always been in back, with the kids in the kitchen. It's even more difficult for us."

Intellectual Music

The group's music is subjective, abstract, intel-lectual and would be difficult to understand were it oot for its burnor - both aural and visual and its theatricality. One number begins with two women cleaning up the stage. They are friendly at first, then one of them becomes irritated by the other's nagging. Two coiffed and madeup mid-dle-class lady musicians appear and play virtuoso cello and bassoon, but then it's housework time for them too. They all prepare dinner white a child blows hysterical trumpet passages. The English magazine Musics called their use of slapstick "a violent response to the imposed domesticity which limits women's lives."

Says Dupery: "I am looking for an equilibrium where there will no longer be women's music or men's music. But I think women are obliged to pass this way first. It may oot be true for the others, but for the the group is a step towards making truly free music with burnan beings."

The Women's Improvising Group will be appearing at the Chapelle des Lombards, 62 rue des Lombards, Paris I. Dec. 14-19 (closed Sunday).

Paris Christmas Fair Offers French Artisans' Work

By Hebe Dorsey

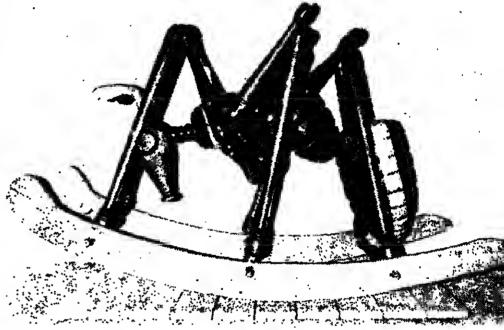

PARIS, Dec. 11 (IHT) — Christmas shopping can be one huge headache. Smart people (they are rare) try to shop all the year round and bring things from faraway places; but most are last-minute shoppers - and department stores are mob scenes.

One way to solve the problem is to go to 12 Avenue Marceau, where 87 French artisans are selling an appealing assortment of their wares. This is the tenth such Christmas fair organized by the French Chambre des Meuers, which groups 96 regional artisans' associ-ations. In the past, they have exhib-ited arts and crafts from Auvergne, Brettany, Dordogne, Limousin Lorraine, Normandy and Poitou-Charentes: this time there is work of artisans from the Loire Valley, Burgundy, Sologne and the south of France — the latter including not only the Riviera, but also the rougher, sterner region of the Prices are reasonable, given that these are handmade, ooe-of-a-kind objects. The rustic, bomemade feeling is just right for the cosy, com-fortable side of Christmas.

Almost Everything

One can find almost everything bere — porcelain dolls, cast-iron candlesticks, embroidered table linen, hand-painted silk scarves, hand-woven wool ponchos, painted dishes, wooden toys, ceramics, marionettes, jewelry, pottery, leather goods and enamels.

Louis Delaporte's "ant" rocker

dy if one wants to send a hamper of assorted food and liquor.

Some of those artisans are well above average. Robert Heraud, with the help of Annie Maume, turns out extraordinary glazed-ce ramic marionettes. Some are neatly encased in wooden frames; others, shaped like teapots, are meant to be hung from buge, country mansculptor Francois Lalanne, whose ostrich-held console was installed in the Elysce Palace by the late Georges Pompidou.

Delaporte's smallest rocker is a

In the middle, behind a barred door, there is a unicyclist pedalling over a string. Wound op, the cyclist rides back and forth while music chimes — all for 220 francs. Some of his miniature toys can be bought for as little as 16

Still in the wood department, Pierre Boutet, from the Loire Valley, makes more conventional but still attractive painted boxes, including a smooth one band-painted in red for 750 francs.

The pottery is also worth looking at. Again we find Heraud, an outstanding artist but one whose work is apparently not well received, probably because his shapes are extreme and unusual. Most of the look like strange, outsized pebble with enamel pourings over then Among the various objects on sal are vases ranging from 80 to 40 francs, including a striking, double mouthed one for 300 francs.

Novel Fund Blooms in W. Germany

By Darrell Delamaide FRANKFURT. Dec. 11 (AP-DJ) — An innovative form of trust fund management is gaining popularity among West German institutional iovestors.

These so-called "special funds" are set up especially for one investor — in effect, a mutual fund with a single customer.

The big German banks also were active in portfolio management, but they began to set up trust departments only in 1959. While Germany, unlike the United States, bas no law explicitly governing the fi-duciary relationship — and a German bank's trust depart-ment manages an investor's-portfolio account solely accord-ing to terms of a contract drawn up between investor and the bank - there is little difference in practice. A more notable contrast to the U.S. system is the smaller fi-nancial clout of pension funds. The bulk of German pension liabilities are covered through halance sheet reserves of employers, rather than via funded pension plans. pension funds grew and sought diversification, they became big buyers of mutual fund certificates. In 1967, conversations between a pension fund manager and investment advisers at Deutsche Bank led to the idea of a special fund - incorporating the professional management and diversification of a mutual fund but tailored to a single client's goals.

BAK, the federal supervisory authority for banks, charged with overseeing German invest-ment companies, accepted the concept of special funds, pro-vided they were set up only for institutional investors with a large number of eventual beneficiaries — that is, pension funds, insurance companies, foundations, churches, professional associations, and, evenu-ally, employee savings plans.

Specific Contract

The first special fund was launched in 1968, under a three-party contract that became the model for all such trusts. Signed

ment company and the depository bank, the agreement speci-fies the purpose of the fund and establishes general investment

The set-up also yields savings, because deals are transacted at bankers' costs. And it provides tax benefits in three areas, as with mutual fund companies: there is no sales tax on securities transactions, no capital gains tax and no withholding tax on interest or dividends. (Germany imposes no capital gains tax on any investment held longer than six months, but the funds need not hold even that long, thus gaining short-term flexibility: the absence of withholding tax-es, which would apply against the eventual levy on interest and dividends, leaves that cash available longer for re-investment]

Most important are the accounting benefits. The client in-stitution books only the purchase of the fund certificate, rather than individual share transactions, and thus is guarded against writeoffs if particular bonds or stocks decline in price; only if the net asset value of the fund sinks below original cost must the investor take a wri-teoff.

Of Crocuses and Daffodils And Gold Bulls in N.Y.

By H. J. Maidenberg

NEW YORK, Dec. 11 (NYT) — There were some uncommonly strange words buzzing about the gold market last week. The gold bulls spoke glowingly of crocuses and daffodils, while the bears com-plained about deceptions practiced by London bullion dealers.

For those who are long on the gold market, crocuses and daffodils have become code words for the time when they expect the adminis-tration's dollar rescue program to become unraveled and bullion prices to once again resume their climb. Crocuses, the bulls explain, ap-pear toward the end of February and daffodils a month later. And they cite a number of factors to justheir belief that gold prices would rebound no later than early spring. For one, they expect the Eu-ropean Monetary System, which is to begin Jan. 1, to enhance the role of gold because the metal would be used to support the Common Market's proposed currency unit. The gold bulls also point to shortages of gasoline and other commodities as one way industry would work around President Carters's price guidelines without directly confronting the White

They also cite the Iranian situa-oon and contend that it would encourage more fear-buying of gold throughout the Mideast. And the bulls say that the Treasury can not possibly borrow enough foreign funds to sop up the estimated $600 billion of Eurodollars awash in the world; an amount that is increasing by 20 percent a year.

Finally, they hold that the sharp drop in gold prices since Nov. 1, which brought bullion down by $50 an ounce, had, in effect, transferred the metal from weak to strong

The gold bears, on the other hand say as for the unraveling of the president's voluntary guidelines on wages and prices, the White House has by no means exhausted its clout in these areas.

While most bears concede that small bolders of bullion were panicked into selling last month, they oote that many larger holders were also sellers. But what really bothered the shorts in the gold market last week were what they referred to as deceptive practices by the London bullion merchants during

The first alleged deception took place a few days before the monthly gold auction by the International Monetary Fund last Wednesday. According to the bears, the big London dealers placed buge orders for bullion on bids that were calculated to less. lated to lose.

In fact, nearly two billion ounces were involved in the bids for the 490,000 ounces available at the IMF sale. The average price was $196.04 an ounce. The losing bids ranged from $180 to $190 an

The purpose of the beavy bidding, the gold bears insist, was to give the impression that demand was extremely beavy and thus keep market prices up. The last sale of IMF bullion, on Nov. 1, produced an average price of $224.02 and was held before President Carter's dellar defense program was an dollar-defense program was an-nounced that day.

Following that auction, which is always held the first Wednesday of each month, the London bullion dealers turned their attention to the next Treasury monthly auction, which is scheduled for Dec. 19. The Treasury auctions are held on the third Tuesday of each month.

U.S. Study Says Sweden Needs Industry Policy

NEW YORK, Dec. 11 (AP-DJ)-Sweden's long-term economic problems run so deep that they cannot be solved without a major restructuring of industry that should be done through a "national industrial policy," according to a U.S. research firm hired by the Swedish government and some companies and banks in that country has concluded. The report by the Boston Consulting Group recommends that such a policy be government-led and involve business and labor.

The report says that the problem is hig portions of Sweden's tradi-tional export industries are not competitive any more on world markets. And those sectors — which include much of Sweden's iron ore, shipbuilding, forest prod-ucts and steel industries — are not likely to regain their former competitiveness because low-cost pro-ducers bave taken over the markets. Whatever change there will be, it is not likely to come soon. The gov-erument has not taken a position oo the report nor committed itself

Officials of Combustion Engineering and an executive of U.S. Steel Corp. were in Hanoi recently, meeting with Vietnamese officials at the Foreign Trade Ministry and other agencies to discuss, among other things, oil exploration, re-ports from the Vietnamese capital

In Hong Kong, sources said Hanoi had expressed interest in a visit early oest year by representa-tives of major U.S. oil companies to Vietnam. The trip is being orga-nized by the American Chamber of Commerce in Hong Kong, which last June arranged the first group visit by U.S. businessmen to Hanoi in 20 years. Since Vietnam was unified under the Communist government in Hanoi in April 1975, natural calamities such as drought and disastrous floods have been burning the economy. But Vietnam's conflict with China and a war with Cambodia have been even more crippling. Failure to resume normal economic contact with the United States also has denied substantial financial and technological aid to Vietnam. As a result, Hanoi has placed great emphasis on development of the country's potentially large pe-troleum reserves. It has signed oil-

U.S. Forum Grows Wary of Economy

NEW YORK, Dec. 11 (AP-DJ)

The Conference Board's economic forum bas grown more pes-simistic about the economy in the past six months, and the govern-ment's moves to curb inflation and belp the dollar have only added to At the latest session of the forum, members on the average predicted that real U.S. gross national product would rise by only 2.4 percent in 1979. That compared with July's 3.3-percent forecast and with the 3.9-percent growth expect-ed this year. About one-third of the forum members expect an actual recession in 1979.

Craig Offers Electronic Translator

Craig Corp. says it is introducing an electronic translator for foreign languages about the size and appearance of a pocket calculator. Plug-in memory modules store about 1,500 words and 50 commoo phrases in each of five languages — Spanish, French, Italian, German and Japanese. The Craig translator costs about $200 including the English module and holds three additional modules which cost about $25 each. The translator also does arithmetic calculations and metric conversions. Litton's Quarter 'Running Fine'

Litton Industries net operating income for the fis-cal second quarter will be as good as or better than the 59 cents a share a year ago, president Fred O'Green says. He says the second quarter was "running fine" and the company expects "no surprises." In last year's second quarter. Litton had a loss equal to 17 cents a share from currency adjustments.

To run the finances of a multi-market business like The Thomson Organisation, a man must be as multifaceted as his company.

His banker must be the same.

David A. Moring, Vice President, Chemical Bank

As Finance Director of The Thomson Organisation, Michael Brown must manage the financial resources and help assure the profitability of a large and rapidly growing group with interests in publishing, travel and petroleum.

Thomson publishes The Times, The Sunday Times, regional newspapers, books, Family Circle in the UK, Living, numerous trade, technical and educational publications in some ten countries around the world, owns Thomson Travel and its subsidiary Britannia Airways, Through an association with the Occidental Consortium, it is involved in the development of oil fields in the North Sea. So Michael Brown must have the countries in which Thomson operates. His Chemical Banker, David Moring, must have the same. "David's understanding of our business is important," says Brown.

in-depth financial knowledge not only about Thomson's products, but about

"But so are the flexibility and fast response he and his Chemical Bankers come up with."

Working closely with Michael Brown, David Moring and his team have provided TTO's publishing interests with multi-purpose, multi-duration credit facilities in six local currencies exactly when required. In a half-hour meeting, they thrashed out an agreement in principle on a medium-term loan for North Sea oil development.

Through Chemco International Leasing, a Chemical Bank subsidiary, they helped Thomson's Britannia Airways lease a Boeing 737-200 in minimum time.

Says Brown, "Chemical Bankers get things don't have to so book to the book of th to go back to the head office for approval on every decision."

Obviously, Michael Brown works with other international banks. But David Moring's personal understanding of The Thomson Organisation and the bank's flexibility are two important reasons their relationship continues to grow. That's what usually happens when financial executives get together with Chemical Bankers.

The difference in money is people.

Large Underwriting Volume

As one of the world's leading issue houses, UBS participated in 35 Swiss franc-denominated bond issues totaling Sfr. 3 billion in the first nine months of this year. UBS also demonstrated its strong placing power on the Eurobond market, where during the same period its London subsidiary served as lead manager in 5, as co-manager in 48 and as under-writer in 59 bond offerings with a combined principal amount of $6.79 billion.

To serve its international operations, the Union Bank of Switzerland operates branches, representative offices or subsidiary companies in these cities: Abu Dhabi, Bahrain, Beirut, Bogota, Buenos Aires, Caracas,

Cayman Islands, Chicago, Hamilton/ Bermuda, Hong Kong, Johannes-burg, London, Los Angeles, Luxem-bourg, Madrid, Melbourne, Mexico, Montreal, Moscow, New York, Panama, Rio de Janeiro, San Francisco, São Paulo, Singapore, Sydney, Tehran, Tokyo and Toronto. In Switzerland, UBS maintains 210 offices, employing a staff of 14,000

The UBS Balance Sheet reflects Switzerland's strong international involvement

Total Assets of Sfr. 57,864,838,000.-

In the third quarter of 1978, the balance sheet total of Union Bank of Switzerland rose from Sfr. 56.9 billion to the high level of Sfr. 57.9 billion. For years, the international business of UBS has generated more than half of these assets.

land's external trade volume amounted to Sfr. 118.9 billion. This comes to Sfr. 18,897 per head of the population, more than eight times as much as in the United States. Further proof of Switzerland's far-reaching international involvement is the substantial amount of capital exported by the Swiss banks in the form of bond issues and private placements

Accent on Internationality

The strong worldwide activities of UBS as a full service bank are a clear reflection of Switzerland's close and continuous interaction with the global economy. As a small but highly industrialized land-locked nation in the heart of Europe, devoid of raw materials and natural resources, Switzerland depends on effective and intensive links with markets everywhere. Free trade is a vital factor for the well-being of its business life. To illustrate, in 1977 Switzer-

A Foreign Correspondent's Life Behind the Lines By Edward Behr. Viking. 316 pp. $12,50.

Reviewed by Parke Fulham

FOREIGN correspondents — save for those stupid enough to get themselves fired - know perfectly well that newspapers and news magazines were created solely for their amusement. How else, given the embarrassing perishability of news in general and paper in particular, can one explain the midnight travel order from Hong Kong to Karachi, from Paris to Poona? How else to explain the inexhaustihle expense accounts, the posh hotels, the caviar and champagne. the strong cigars and lovely women that surround Orville Trenchcoat as he hurtles between continents?

Persuading Orville to admit it. however, is something else. In pub-lic, stress is usually laid on one's cool proximity to the odd bullet, shell or atrocity, rather less on the poolside vistas atop Hong Kong's Mandarin or beside Delhi s Oberoi. But as Edward Behr points out, in this very funny book, "reporters, relaxing and drinking together, are always swapping stories about what happened, and these stories are funnier, truer and more tevealing than anything they write for their media." That is about as close as Behr comes to actually hiurting out the truth that foreign correspondents have the best job in the world. But the anecdotes that spice his autobiography make it ahundantly clear that a reporter leads a considerably livelier professional life than, say, an average IBM execu-tive. Some outsiders seem to agree. Consider, for example, an incident that occurred during Pope Paul VTs visit to the Holy Land in 1969. Georges Menager, then a Paris photographer, found himself trapped oext to the Pootiff in the center of a huge, cheering crowd. While police struggled to open a path, the Pope eyed Menager warily, then said: "What an interesting life you must lead." Replied Menager: "You haven't done so badly

Some Well-Aimed Swipes

Not all of Behr's book is anecdotal. In passing, he takes several well-aimed swipes at deserving fellow journalists such as Oriana Fallaci, for some awfully sporty "onthe-spot" reporting to Vietnam, and at Larry Collins and Domi-nique Lapierre for their enthusi-asm, in "Freedom at Midnight" in accepting Lord Mountbatten's at-least-questionable explanation for his sudden decision to grant India its independence in the midst of rapidly building religious strife which ultimately cost millions of lives. And there are sharp remarks as well aimed at editors who follow news as fads, dropping certain stories in midstream to concentrate on fresher events. But in this story of Behr's career, first as a young Indian Army officer at the end of World War II, then as a Reuters traince in London and Paris, a

The bidding on the diagramed deal was an attempt to avoid the trap of playing in the four-four spade fit. Looking at the North-South hands, it is easy to see that a slam in a red suit is hoosiess. South's canape sequence, starting with a short suit and then jumping in a longer one, showed in his methods a sound hand with four spades and a strong six-card heart suit. North then headed for slam and showed good judgment in selecting hearts as the best resting-place. West led a pedestrian club, and South had no trouble in drawing trumps, driving out the dia-mond ace and claiming the slam.

In the replay, two standard bidders reached the same contract as shown in the diagram. Unluckily for them. West was listening carefully to the bidding. He inferred

McEnroe Sizzles in Davis Cup Triumph

By Neil Amdur

RANCHO MIRAGE, Calif. Dec. 11 (NYT) — John McEnroe brought the Davis Cup back to the United States yesterday for the first time in six years, and few players ever did it better.

House Cleans Itself: So Much for Ethics

Washington — All during the political campaign we heard congressional candidates shout to their electorates. "If you that just because we're allowing our

Caucus met in secret session and voted not to prevent House memhers who had been convicted or been convicted or indicted for crimes, or even censured by the legislative hody. From losing the chairmanhies of chairmanships of Buchwald their committees. In overwhelming votes the Democratic Caucus sent out word that it wasn't going to he bogged down by the silly ethical standards it was demanding of the other branches of government.

As one congressman told me. "Just because a House member has been convicted or indicted by the courts doesn't mean be can't chair a subcommittee. I think what happens between a man and the Justice Department is his own business, and we're not in the position to judge him."

"I assume this is also true of members of the House reprimanded for taking money from the South Koreans'

"It certainly is. We reprimanded those people because, after spending so much time and money, the public expected us to do something about the Korean scandal. But never in our wildest dreams were we prepared to take a man's subcommittee away from him for doing something unethical. We're not

"I agree." I told the congressman. "But the entire country is rather puzzled by what is going on. If a man bas been convicted of a crime, indicted for one or reprimanded for violating the ethical standards of the House, do you believe he should be chairing committees that are responsible for the when we returned to Washington

"Let he who is not guilty of tak-

> "What have you done to punish these congressmen?" I

"Well, we've moved the parking place of one indicted Democrat from the A level to the B level of garage until he's cleared

"I didn't know that." I admitted. And in the House barbershop we now have a new rule that any-one convicted of a felony has to go to the end of the line."

'i didn't know that." "And anyone reprimanded by the full House must use the public elevator instead of the members' elevator for two weeks.

"I didn't know that." The House is tough, hut it's fair. We can't ask other people to clean their house if we don't clean our own.

"I guess there is nothing wrong with a congressman chairing a com-mittee while he's under indictment," I said.

"On the contrary. In most cases being indicted makes a congressman a better chairman, He works harder because be never knows if he's going to jail."

"You understand it," I said, "I understand it. But bow can we make the American people understand that what the Democratic Caucus bas done is best for the

BEVERLY HILLS. Calif. — Robert Morley is by now so familiar as the ample spokesman for British Airways that this role, which has made him as synony-mous with England as John Bull, threatens to overshadow his 50vear career as an actor and play-wright on both sides of the

Now, however, the 70-year-old Morley is on view in "Who's Killing the Great Chefs of Europe?" as the imperious editor of an influential London gour-met magazine, a man who so loves his subject that he's in dan-ger of eating himself to death. Warner Bros. sent him on a whirlwind tour to promote it in the U.S. (it opens in Paris Wednesday.) By the time Morley sat down to lunch the other day beside the pool at a Beverly Hills Hotel, he was looking for a respite from his hectic schedule - and from talking about the film. Although fatigued, he gamely lived up to his reputation as a mischievous wit. "I think it was Ted Kotcheff, the director, who wanted me for the film," said Morley, who was wearing a lavender-and-white striped shirt and a blue suit, "He usually does my TV commercials, so he knows my foibles.

Ted may be a Canadian, but he's got deep traces of East Asian melancholy. Sometimes he's in despair, especially when I'm on the set, I must tear him up a

He does 42 takes - I don't mind, I get better with each one. Ah, one of the great things about being on a junket is that someone's picking up the bills," said Morley, interrupting himself to peruse an expensive menti (and settle for a modest club sandwich, a couple of gins-and-tonic and strawberries with whipped стеать).

"The picture was as fun as it ever is for me. I'm a besitant actor. But there was really never much fun in doing a film in restaurants. There was always a cer-

"Norma Shearer had an orchestra on the set, and the direc-tor. Woody Van Dyke, always had a coterie of old actors hiding behind the seats. [Van Dyke was well-loved for keeping extras on the payroll as much as possible

throughout the Depression.]
One day I was a bit late, and Van Dyke made me apologize to everyone — and he meant every-one! I finally climbed up to the rafters to shout out my apologies.

"On my first day I had to carry a newhorn bahy. I was terrified that I would drop it or that it would be harmed by the bright lights. Then this enormous gen-tleman came up to me and said, 'Don't do it right and we can get an extra day."

"Norma was lovely, a great star, but [Irving] Thalberg died and she got out of it all with a lot of Loew's stock. She married that nice ski instructor and lived happily ever after. She was a real star, though, wasn't sbe?"

Morley said that it's been seven or eight years now that be's been doing the TV compercials. "I have script approval," be explained, "I always try to put the jokes in myself but not always successfully.

As for recent activities, the actor has just written and performed his own play: "I played a transvestite — I never got it right. I took it on tour, and we discovered that its technical problems were insurmountable. In a way it wasn't bad, but not very good either. It seemed a good subject for a comedy. I appeared in ball dress and looked like a debutante.

"I suppose I'll have to do something soon. I'll probably do a film in India, and next spring if I don't find a play. I'll write one for myself. That's not as good, hut you get double royal-ties.

"Really I prefer the stage. Let's say I understand the the-ater, where I've never understood films."

However, Morley did have one special qualification for "Great Chefs"—he has written a restaurant column: "I was food critic of Punch," he said. "That sounds very grand, doesn't it? My son Sheridan is the editor, but when be came aboard be pushed me out!

"Ob yes, there are still many good restaurants in London, Once Hitchcock took me someplace in downtown Los Angeles - Perino's, I think it was - and everything was ordered in French. But when the food arrived the waiter said, "Who gets the frog's legs?"
